CAROL'S MOUNTAIN PALACE BOASTS A MULTIPLE GUARD

Seven Concentric Circles of Riflemen Are On Duty; Policemen in Between

WRITER TURNED BACK

Codreanu Had Dream Which He is Using for Beloved Country

(Note: France worries about where Rumania will stand in the event of another European war. H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the twenty-first article of his series "Will War Come?" The growth of the "Iron Guard" has given France plenty of cause for worry. Knickerbocker states that party is plainly against any alliance with France.)

SINAI, Mar. 7.—(INS)—Seven concentric circles of riflemen with fixed bayonets surround the palace of King Carol in this mountain resort where the sovereigns of Rumania make their home. Between each circle of soldiers stand policemen. Along the roads a score of secret service men in plain clothes bring the special talents of the Siguranza to help the military and police guard the life of their King.

In a sleigh drawn by two mountain ponies we drove in jerks along the snow path leading to the palace. It winds through a magnificent park of hundreds of acres of pine trees whose snow-flecked tops reach up and brush the low gray sky. Every hundred yards a guard stopped us and examined our royal pass.

Within sight of the palace at the regular entrance the guard turned us back. At another entrance the guard refused to recognize our pass. With a German engineer who lived in the palace we started down another road. Promptly the guard came running, and showing a revolver in our stomachs he ordered us back to the military barracks. The revolver shook as the guard shouted.

It shook because the wings of the arch angel Gabriel were shadowing the palace of Carol King of Rumania. The wings of that angelic warrior of the hosts of heaven were shadowing all Rumania. And the fantastic fact is that the shadow of the arch angel Gabriel's wings has something to do with the question of how the next war, if it comes, may turn out, for Germany or for France.

Twelve years ago an eighteen year old boy, son of a teacher of German in a secondary school in Moldavia, brooded deeply over the national reputation of Rumania. The quips that Rumania's enemies pass upon her cut him deeply. "Mania," he heard a scoff-er say, "is a form of mental disease. Kleptomania is the form of mental disease that makes an individual a thief. But when you speak of kleptomania as applied to a whole nation, you call it Rumania."

The boy hated that kind of a joke. He hated the corruption that he saw on every side of him. He looked for a

ENDORSES ARTICLES

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Mar. 7.—(INS)—Major General Smedley D. Butler, retired commander of the United States marine corps, today characterized the series of articles being written by H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service European correspondent, on the subject "Will War Come?" as a "remarkable reportorial achievement."

"I am in thorough accord with these articles," said the fiery ex-marine commander who is an outstanding authority on military matters here and abroad.

"They are simply splendid. Knickerbocker's diagnosis of the situation in Europe is most accurate and it would be a good thing for everybody to read the articles."

"He presents the case in Europe in a remarkable manner that can be understood by every layman. And that is what we need—the layman educated to know what is happening in Europe today."

Fear Another Severe Cold Spell Will Damage Grass and Grain

DAMAGE TO PEACH BUDS

For the town and city dwellers the passing of the snow during the past few days did not come too soon, but on the other hand a majority of the farmers would have welcomed its presence here for at least several weeks because with the snow gone there remains no protection for the grains and grasses.

Commenting on the rapidly disappearing snow a few days ago, a veteran Bucks county farmer said he wished it would remain at least until there would be no more severe frosts this season. This point was brought out also by County Agent William F. Greenawalt, who said because with the passing of the snow the soil in which had been sown grass and grain has been left without protection.

Should there be no more cold weather, the results will not be harmful, but should the temperature get far below the freezing mark again, there is a danger of a heaving of the soil and this would result in forcing the roots of the grass and grain from the ground.

Mr. Greenawalt said that the heavy snows during the past few weeks had been very beneficial to the farmers because it served as a blanket for the grass and grain during the extremely cold weather. Had they not been covered by the deep blanket of snow, there is a possibility that much of the grass and grain would have suffered from winter kill.

There is little danger that farmers will be in want of water for the remainder of the winter season. Last Fall there was a threatened shortage of water, but the rains during the latter part of the season served to tide them over, and as a result of the melting of the snow and the rain during the past few days a good supply of water for the farmers for the remainder of the season has been assured.

There is a possibility that householders next summer will pay top notch prices for their peaches owing to the fact of a 100 per cent kill of the buds during the two extremely cold snaps during the winter.

County Agent Greenawalt stated that it is impossible for peach buds to survive with the temperature below the 14 degrees below zero mark. It is

SPARKS FROM CHIMNEY GREATLY DAMAGE HOUSE

Firemen Hampered in Fight By Wind and Lack of Water; Loss, $2000

AT OXFORD VALLEY

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Mar. 7.—Fanned by a high wind yesterday afternoon, sparks from a chimney wrought havoc at the residence of Andrew Moore, on the farm of Joseph Tatum, Lincoln Highway, Oxford Valley.

The blaze, discovered at 3.10 by Mrs. Moore, without doubt started from sparks which emanated from the chimney. The shingle roof on the structure fell ready prey to the blaze, with the result that the top portion of the house was burned to the attic floor.

The building was of frame construction, 2½ stories in height. At the time of the blaze Mrs. Moore and her son were at home. Fire companies were summoned, with Langhorne, South Langhorne, Falls Township and Morrisville responding.

The firemen were handicapped by the high wind, and also by lack of a water supply. The blaze was fought with booster and chemical tanks. The building was considerably damaged by the chemicals and fire, with loss being placed between $2000 and $2500.

Some furniture was destroyed, and some was taken to a place of safety by firemen and neighbors.

A chimney fire occurred at the residence of Phillip VanVossen, Durham Road, Middletown Township, yesterday at 5.30 p. m. William Penn Fire Company was summoned, but did not get into action.

PERKASIE ABANDONS IDEA OF MAKING EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS TO MUNICIPALLY-OWNED ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT AT THIS TIME

Will Not Accept the Offer of PWA Funds For The Project

TO REBUILD STREETS

Council Decides That Former Project Would Be Too Expensive

PERKASIE, Mar. 7.—The decision to abandon the plans for the extensive improvements to the municipally owned electric light plant with the financial aid of the P. W. A. and plans to make application to the C. W. A. for help in making permanent improvements to several streets were the two outstanding accomplishments at the monthly meeting of Borough Council.

Some months ago the borough's engineer recommended that extensive improvements be made to the electric light plant. He further suggested that the borough apply to the P. W. A. for financial aid. The councilmen acted upon the suggestion of the engineer in the way of making the application and several weeks ago word was received by the borough secretary that the request for financial aid had been granted.

The estimated cost of the improvements was placed at $55,000 and of this amount $40,000 would have to be repaid by the borough. The matter was discussed at length at the meeting and Council finally decided that the improvements would involve too large an expenditure and as a result the idea was abandoned.

During the evening Council approved a plan submitted by the engineer for the permanent improvement of three blocks of streets in the borough. The engineer was directed to make application immediately for C. W. A. assistance in bringing about these improvements.

According to the estimate of the borough engineer, the borough will have to pay a minimum of $7,584.35 for material. He estimated that the maximum cost of the material would be $9,992.15. The difference in these amounts, he explained, lies in the fact that the borough has its own stone quarry. If it quarries its own stone and mixes its own surface material, the

SELL WEEKLY NEWSPAPER FOR $100 AT DOYLESTOWN

Bankrupt Sale of J. A. Gardy Totals $1575 For Equipment

MAGAZINE IS INCLUDED

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 7.—Publication rights, subscription lists and advertising contracts of a magazine were sold for $10 and a weekly newspaper brought $100 on Monday afternoon at the bankruptcy sale of J. A. Gardy, West State street. The total amount of the sale, according to Robert G. Hendricks, Referee in Bankruptcy, amounted to $1575.

Practically all of the equipment of the printing shop operated by Mr. Gardy, together with fixtures in the stationery store run in conjunction with the shop, were purchased by Julian W. Gardy, of Doylestown, a brother.

"Modern Game Breeding," a magazine published by Mr. Gardy, was sold for $10 to Julian Gardy. "The Bucks County News," a weekly newspaper that started publication a short time ago, was sold for $100 to George Bennett, of Haboro, representing the Robinson Publishing Company. The first bid on the newspaper was $54.

An expensive Miehle vehicle press was purchased by Julian Gardy for $940. A Philadelphia concern paid $80 for a paper cutter, while a paper folder sold for $40.

A stapling machine sold for $12, an electric press for $70, another press for $52.50, and a quantity of printer's ink for $5.50. A typewriter with desk was sold for $26. Mrs. Howard W. Atkinson paid $12 for a steel filing cabinet; Preston Lee paid $11 for another cabinet, and Victor Junette bought a third cabinet for $10. A cash register sold for $40 to Julian Gardy. A show case brought $15 and an adding machine sold for $27.50. A real bargain was the sale of an automatic envelope sealer for $1. Eight sections of metal shelving sold for $52 and five other sections sold for $17 to Julian Gardy. An automobile sold for $60.

The store was jammed to capacity when the sale started. Many "bargain seekers" from Philadelphia's second-hand office supply houses were on hand but they returned utterly disgusted.

"My, if I could hold a sale like this once a year I'd think Christmas came twice a year," said one second-hand dealer in printing equipment and office supplies. "I never saw such high prices brought at any sale."

The receiver in the sale was Frank B. Bertles, who today is taking charge of the distribution of the goods sold. Josh Anderson, of Carversville, was the auctioneer.

MOTHER OF 18 CHARGED WITH SWINDLING GAME

Alleged To Have Mulcted Three Women of Their Life Savings

HAD ROMANCE IN JAIL

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 7.—(INS)—A soft-spoken, dignified mother of 13 children, termed by local police "the greatest confidence artist in America," was back in a jail cell today, awaiting arraignment on an accusation familiar to her—swindling.

Released six months ago from the House of Correction at Holmesburg, Pa., Mrs. Anna McElroy, 55, this time was accused of having mulcted three women out of their life savings, approximately $1100.

In this latest episode of her checkered career the self-styled "heirress to a million dollar fortune in Germany" shared the misfortune of falling afoul of the law with the man whom she married after a romance within Holmesburg's high walls. Edward McElroy, a guard at the house of correction where he first met the prisoner who was later to become his wife, also occupied a cell facing the same charges of conspiracy, fraudulent conversion and obtaining money under false pretenses.

Mrs. McElroy, formerly known as Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Beswick, was arrested on complaints of three women who told authorities they had advanced money to the woman after she had promised them a 100 per cent return and a 50 per cent "bonus." The complainants are Miss Mary Fogarty, 63, Mrs. Anna Roberts, and Mrs. Mabel Clark at whose home the McElroys boarded.

Miss Fogarty claimed to have been the heaviest loser, declaring she had turned over $775 in cash and a $50 liberty bond to Mrs. McElroy. Mrs. Roberts said she advanced $143 to the accused woman, while Mrs. Clark alleged she lost $125 in the same fashion.

Investigating detectives charged that Mrs. McElroy used the same old device, having told each of the women that she is the principal heirress to a million-dollar estate in Germany, but that her bequest was being held up by the claims of brothers. She obtained the money, it was charged, by declaring she needed finances with which to carry on litigation.

Mrs. McElroy, then known as Mrs. Beswick, first attained the public limelight ten years ago when during her trial for swindling she testified that she had been leading a double life, dividing her time between two husbands. She admitted on the witness stand that she had alternately lived in the home of her first husband and father of her children, Samuel E. Beswick, and in the suburban Fox Chase home of William C. Martin, banker. Martin testified that he believed the woman was a widow or a divorcee when he married her.

Testimony was offered during the trial to the effect that the then Mrs. Beswick had received $50,000 from Martin on the representation that she

DRIVES CAR 3000 MILES WITHOUT A SCRATCH; BACKS THROUGH DOOR

(By "The Stroller")

An acquaintance of mine recently returned from Florida in a new automobile.

He purchased the car before leaving for Florida and drove south and back in a splendid new machine.

He exercised extremely good care to see that the car was not abused. He did not drive faster than he should for the first 500 miles and he had the oil changed regularly. He returned to Bristol with the machine none the worse for the 3,000 miles it had traveled.

The car was placed in the garage.

A few hours later my friend went to the garage and thought he would turn the motor over to see if everything was still okay.

As the motor went off with a snap, the car jumped back through the garage door.

The car had been left in reverse and was damaged as it tore through the garage door. After traveling 3,000 miles with scarcely a scratch then only to back through the garage door and be damaged!

"FIRST LADY" TO START ECONOMIC INVESTIGATION

Will Study Conditions In The Caribbean Islands; At Puerto Rico Today

ENJOYS SIGHT-SEEING

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Mar. 7.—(INS)—Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands were on today's schedule of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's airplane tour of the West Indies.

Today also was to bring the beginning of Mrs. Roosevelt's actual investigation into the economic conditions of the Caribbean Islands. Until now she has been a plain tourist and sightseer.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her party were scheduled to take off from here for San Juan, capital of Puerto Rico, and were to leave San Juan at noon for a 1½-hour flight to St. Thomas, capital of the Virgin Islands.

Mrs. Roosevelt was taken on a sight-seeing tour almost immediately after her arrival here last night, completing a 750-mile flight from Miami, Florida. She was taken on a drive through crooked streets to the country club on a hill outside the capital.

The American first lady was particularly entertained by the sight of donkeys carrying huge loads and by natives balancing great baskets on their heads. She was interested in a native furniture factory but was unable to inspect it.

The temperature was 85, but Mrs. Roosevelt was told it was the coldest day of the year.

ICE MOVING DOWNSTREAM IN SATISFACTORY FASHION

Entire River Is Filled With Jagged Cakes Moving At Rapid Rate

WATER LEVEL DROPPING

Ice is moving out of the Delaware River very nicely and much of the fear of floods has lessened.

The river, opposite Bristol, this morning was a mass of jagged cakes of ice floating down stream with the tide, moving about 12 miles per hour. The moving ice made some slight noise as the cakes crunched against each other. Occasionally an exceptionally heavy cake would turn over in the water or else crash into a wharf. Some of the cakes measured 12 to 14 inches in thickness.

The fact that the stream is open throughout its entire length gives both the ice and the water ample opportunity to move seaward and as long as this continues, the flood danger is not so great.

Most of the ice has disappeared from the lower end of the Neshaunim Creek so far as the stream is concerned but it is piled high on the banks and even in the yards and on the lawns of some of the summer cottages along Haunted Lane.

In Morrisville and at Trenton conditions are considered much improved, although much damage has been done both by the high water and the ice.

Ice is piled on the Terminal Dock at Trenton and the mass movement of the ice carried the 150-foot pier of the Sun Oil Company on Duck Island bobbing downstream. The pier had been wrecked by previous ice floes.

TYPICAL AMERICAN

Completion of the tabulation of statistics gathered at the Century of Progress last summer substantiates the expected. The Harvard professors who took the measurements and the complexions of exposition visitors found out what the typical American looks like, and they found him just what they knew he would be.

He is taller, heavier and runs more to blonds than to blondes. That is, there are more men than women with light complexions.

It is not surprising that the American people are running to type, becoming homogeneous. There has been little or no immigration and much inter-marrying of the races in recent years. Once a country puts up the bars against immigration racial variety becomes less conspicuous.

No country can admit aliens or assimilate them without altering its own national characteristics. Prior to the influx of immigrants from Southern Europe the trend here was toward the tall Nordic blond. Then for half a century the trend was toward the swarthy and short. Today the average American is taller than he was 15 years ago and he has brown hair.

Having been through the stage of greatest immigration the United States can be depended upon to produce a future type not very much different from the 1934 model.

SINGLE HOMES

Enormous home hotels will one day supplant the traditional one-family house in America, predicts a modernistic architect who looks upon the ideal of life in a one-family house as nothing more than the old-fashioned conception of civilization.

The trend has, to be sure, been in that direction in the cities, where something less than the ideal is accepted for its greater convenience or for financial reasons. But even there the suburbs with their one-family houses swallow up the cliff-dwellers once it is theirs to choose. And in the small town, where the double-house, row of houses and flat are the nearest things to the city apartment, the remand is for single houses set on wider and deeper lots.

This does not mean that tomorrow's trend will not turn to the "home hotel." When the large apartment can offer more privacy through actually sound-proof walls, air-conditioning permitting closed windows and doors the year around and home ownership within the reach of small incomes, then the modernist architect's dream will come true.

But for today each one-family dwelling represents in greater or less degree one of man's most natural instincts—that of owning his home. And as yet the apartment does not satisfy that instinct.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., ...
Not so many years ago Baby Marie Osborne must have earned several hundred thousand dollars as a child star.

Today, at 22, she is deeply grateful for a chance to serve as Ginger Rogers' stand-in.

This particular story of the screen prodigy who lost both fame and dollars might never have come to such a happy ending if it hadn't been for Ginger's mother, Lela.

For Marie Osborne, now married to a young draftsman and the mother of a baby, had been fighting in vain to get back on the screen. For a while, she eked in a five and ten cent store in Huntington Park. Then, several months ago, she managed to get extra work under Director Henry King at Fox. That job ended and, just for luck, she applied to do a part at the little theater run by Ginger's mother.

Mrs. Rogers came upon the name. She remembered the youngster for whom she used to write scenarios years ago, and she sent for Marie. As a result of the meeting, the former starlet began work yesterday as Ginger's stand-in. She steps aside now before the cameras start to turn, but she is happy to be back in a studio and hopes that her luck has changed.

Arthur Caesar, who deserted the late spots for the quiet of Laguna Beach, pops up at last with a bon mot.

"I'm writing a book on supervisors," he says. "My title is 'Little Mind, What Now?'"

Mae Clarke phoned the M.G.M. studio not to expect her on March 2, as she intended to spend the day lying in bed in a dark room with all the doors and windows locked.

Two years ago, on the second of March, the star suffered a physical breakdown which kept her off the screen for months.

Last year, on the same date, she broke her jaw in an automobile accident and spent more weeks in idleness.

"I'm not taking any more chances," said Mae.

Film stars receive strange letters but the height of something or other is one that Dorothy Wilson, Paramount starlet, just got from a candidate for the State Senate in Pennsylvania.

This gentleman confides that the newspapers have been trying to get him to admit a secret romance with Dorothy. Seems as the would-be Senator goes with a girl who is the star's double and that someone (we give you three guesses who did it) has supplied the papers with a snapshot of the two.

Mr. Candidate says the reporters have been after him to admit that the girl is Dorothy and that he has declined to affirm or deny it.

Whereupon, he has the effrontery (but really it's too funny for that) to suggest that the mystery be kept up as good publicity for the both of them.

And if the Philadelphia papers want the name of the candidate, I can supply it.

It would be kinder to spare Buster Crabbe the blushes, but the incident is too funny.

Yesterday someone wandered into a dark sound stage at Paramount and was startled to hear a man's voice sonorously delivering passages of sentimental poetry.

The intruder felt he just had to know what was going on, so he investigated and came upon Buster standing in the center of the stage and delivering a particularly melting line.

Business of red-hot embarrassment on Buster's part.

Seems as the ex-swimming star is going to a voice coach and the instructor told him that reading poetry aloud would improve his sense of pucing and rhythm.

Of course, everybody pretends not to believe this, and Buster is dying from the ribs.

The actors in "Tarzan and His Mate" have been willing to stay up late and finish the picture, but not so the rhino that M.G.M. imported at a cost of $19,000. On the last night of the picture, the property men had to play a phonograph to keep the hefty animal awake. And, believe it or not, the tune was "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

DID YOU KNOW—
That Lionel Barrymore made his stage debut at the age of 5? He played a crying baby in an Italian play starring his father, Maurice Barrymore.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

Stanley poked up the fire and put away the tea things. She laid the chops for dinner in their pan and put two potatoes over the flame to boil and prepared a salad in the next room, now that Marcia and Gerda were gone, she could hear the steady clack of John Harmon's typewriter.

She had had a bad fifteen minutes, but now that she was alone she found that she was oddly, coldly detached. Her hands did things mechanically. Her mind worked in much the same way.

Drew was engaged . . . Drew was going to be married . . . in June . . . to a girl named Janet . . . That ought to end everything, settle the whole foolish situation once and for all—but it didn't. Any more than her marrying John Harmon had ended everything—settled anything. This feeling that she had for Drew was something between Drew and herself which nothing else could possibly alter or affect. There had been a time when she had felt that this wasn't so, when she had thought that surely the love she had for John Harmon must completely destroy the desire that she had for Drew Armitage. She had clung to this belief pathetically and now she relinquished it with a dumb sort of pain—but relinquish it she did, for she knew now, when she faced the fact of his marriage, that nothing was changed, that nothing—not John Harmon, nor the girl in Chicago, nor Drew's utter and unbroken silence—could alter the feeling which at the mere mention of his name possessed her.

Suddenly she felt tired and horribly lonely. She knew a great desire to go to John Harmon; to tell him everything find solace and comfort and forgetfulness in the pressure of his steady arms, blot out the memory of Drew's hot, demanding kisses with the sweetness of John Harmon's tender ones; and thus in abandoning herself to the gentleness of John Harmon's love gain release from that other, and less worthy emotion.

She crossed the room and threw open the door to the study. John Harmon was bent over his typewriter, his hair rumpled, his eyes tired, but his smile, weary though it was, was full of welcome.

"Hello, Stan. What the devil's the matter? You look completely fagged—those women too much for you?"

Looking at him sitting there, worn and unmistakably fagged himself, Stanley knew suddenly that she was not going to tell him anything—not now, at least, when he was so obviously in need of rest and food and relaxation himself.

"Just about—and you've worked quite long enough for one day. How's it going?" She motioned to the pile of manuscript he had piled up since lunch.

"It's going fine," John Harmon sat back in his chair and ran his fingers through his hair, his eyes shining through their fatigue. "I've caught something this time, Stanley, something real and warm and pulsing. It's the sort of thing I used to dream about doing—and then deserted for the other, you know, the clever situation, the amusing phrase. That sort of thing—I can't get away from it entirely—I'm not sure I want to—but it's relegated to where it belongs. It's no longer the end and aim of my writing. My people are real this time, Stan, they sacrifice a lot in cleverness, a lot in brilliance—but they're human, human 'way through."

"I'm glad, John Harmon, glad Dennis was right, glad she had the courage to tell you, glad you had the courage to find yourself again. Life isn't always as simple as that." She turned abruptly and went back to her gas plate, tying an apron over her blue frock.

John Harmon drew a hand across rather puzzled brown eyes—Stanley had sounded a bit fed up with things, a bit cynical, unlike herself. Had those women been disagreeable, made her restless, dissatisfied? But that wasn't fair to Stanley, to her good sense, her beautiful loyalty. He washed his hands, brushed his hair and went out to help her get the supper.

"I don't want Drew, darling. I want you. Will you believe that, John Harmon—always?"

Stanley was turning the chops in their iron pan, her back to him.

"Shall I fix the coffee?" he asked, with a rather apparent attempt at cheerfulness.

"If you want to."

He did so, wishing it required more effort. He felt awkward, helpless in the face of Stanley's continued silence. "Let's leave the dishes and go to a movie," he suggested with a simulated eagerness, rearranging an already perfectly set table.

"You know I don't like to leave the dishes, and anyway we can't afford movies twice a week—we've been once already."

"Well, I guess it won't break us to go again. Or perhaps you'd like to take a walk—it's going to be a grand night for walking."

Stanley transferred the chops to a small platter, took up the potatoes and turned to the ice-box for the salads.

"Can't I help you?" John Harmon stood just behind her, anxious-eyed, wondering what it was all about.

Slowly Stanley swung around and faced him. "I don't know whether you can or not, Drew is being married—in June."

She looked away swiftly, hating herself for having hurt him like that, hating him for letting her see that she had.

"Oh," he said slowly, his hands slipping away from where they had had rested lightly on her shoulders. "Drew, I'm afraid I'd nearly forgotten about—Drew, Stanley."

"I thought I had too—and now I find I haven't. I don't suppose I should have told you, John Harmon, a wife isn't supposed to tell her husband that she is—upset because a former lover is getting himself married." Stanley's voice broke on a high, thin note; for a horrifying moment she thought she was going to cry, or laugh foolishly, but she didn't, because John Harmon put his arms about her suddenly and held her fiercely to his heart.

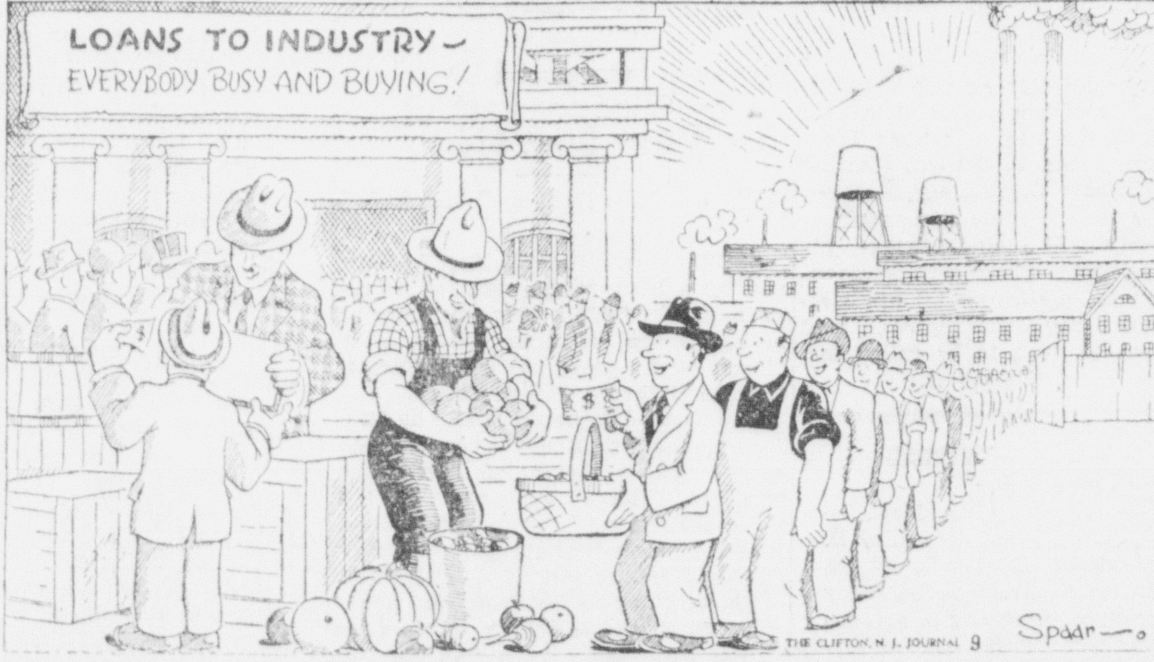

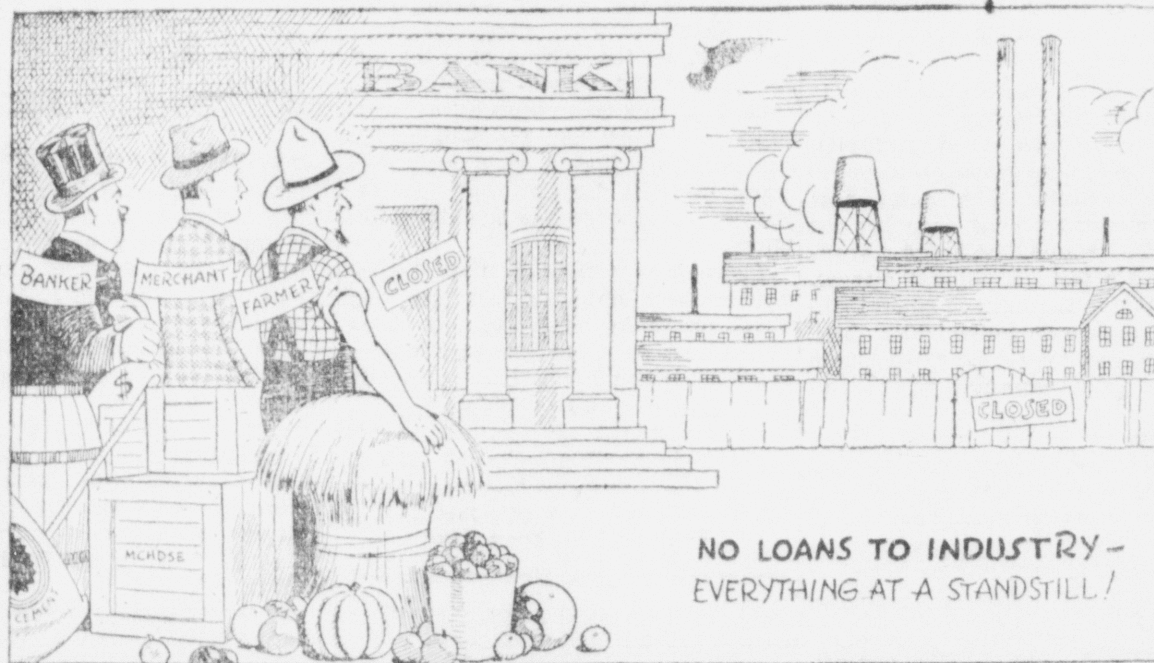

"Don't talk about it any more—not right now anyway. And I'm glad you told me, darling."

He picked her up abruptly and carried her to the wing chair and sat down with her still in his arms.

It Makes A Difference With An R. F. C. for Industry

UNTIL Industry is given a chance to get back to normalcy, the farmer, the merchant, the banker, in fact everyone else, will find their business below normal. Without the factory wheels turning, there can be no prosperity for anybody.

The reason is simply this: a very large percentage of American consumers are either industrial workers or are engaged in some business closely allied with industry. When they are without full-sized pay envelopes, as they have been since the depression, they cannot buy the farmers' produce, they cannot patronize the merchant, they cannot deposit money in banks. The railroads, insurance companies, even the public utility companies, feel the pinch.

The government has already given assistance to some of these groups of hard-hit enterprises to protect their capital and their stockholders. It has provided RFC loans for banks, agriculture and others. We believe these loans were necessary, but they were not the only ones necessary.

RFC loans for industry would not only protect more investors, but would protect the jobs and payrolls of a vast army of workers. This, in turn, would help all the other groups that have received loans to pay off their obligations to the government.

depreciations as these other groups, is in need of R. F. C. loans. Give it this help and the main door to re-employment will be thrown open.

Our government's object has been to see that people were given jobs—and jobs were created for them at government expense. We agree with the administration on this when it becomes vitally necessary to supply people with a chance to make a living. But why not, since people must be given jobs, open the regular channels of industrial employment and put them to work at productive labor, in jobs at which they are experienced?

Until industry is given a chance to get back to normalcy, nothing else can get back to normalcy. All of the groups that have received loans to date are dependent upon industrial prosperity. They will use up loan after loan so long as industry is stagnant.

Industry is a creator of wealth of jobs. It makes freight for railroads to carry. It makes necessary human travel. It pays wages so men and women can pay their insurance premiums and have money to deposit in banks. When banks have deposits, insurance companies are paid premiums and carriers have normal freight and passenger service. They will need no loans.

Industry, suffering from the same shrinkages and

ALL OF THE WORLD LOVES A WEDDING; ONE GARB DESCRIBED

By Nadia De Beaud
(L. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)
PARIS — (INS) — The whole world loves a wedding, and the sight of the young bride swathed in clouds of white tulle always resuscitates a sad happiness in the hearts of all. Many prominent Americans were present at the wedding of Mlle. Christine Chaplowska, daughter of the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Chaplowska, to the Count Maurice Bartillat, and lovely gifts were sent by Mrs. de Dantes, Princess Margaret Boncompagni, the Marquise de Chambrun and many other equally well known Americans. The bride looked charming in a white satin Worth gown, modeled along medieval lines, clinging closely to the body with a wide skirt and long train. The material was gathered in front into a little knot and a row of tiny buttons finished the back.

cost of material will be held down to the minimum.

The engineer estimated that the cost of the labor would amount to $5,550 and that from 125 to 140 men would be required to complete the project by May 1.

In his estimate of the cost of the material the engineer had one item of $1100 for the hire of a truck. After having taken this into consideration, Council decided rather than to pay this amount for truck hire to purchase one.

Council also instructed the engineer to make application for additional funds for the completion of the Ninth street sewer project. It was stated that the original sum granted by the C. W. A. will not cover the cost of the work. The engineer was instructed to make a survey of the uncompleted work and to immediately file application for additional funds.

The outstanding debt on the municipally owned electric light plant was reduced to the extent of $2000 at the meeting. The present outstanding debt on the plant is $6000.

Council was informed by the members of the street committee that the cost of removing snow from the streets during the past two weeks had amounted to $490. The electric light committee recommended the purchase of four tons of coal for the light plant.

During the meeting it was learned that a local manufacturer had refused to pay his electric light bill on the grounds of certain technicalities. After taking the matter into consideration Council decided to give the manufacturer 10 days' time to pay the bill and if not paid in that time, to cut off his current.

Gross sales at the electric light plant during the past month amounted to $5,503.53. The expenditures totaled $4322.70 and the net earnings were $1180.78. Tax Collector Ziegenfuss reported the amount of the outstanding taxes to be $6,788.60.

THREE DUSEK BROTHERS ARE BILLED AT ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 7.—The most unique wrestling show ever carded for the arena has been closed by Matchmaker John Ipp for tonight's card. The durable Dusek brothers, Ernie, Rudy, and Emil, will be the three principals in three different matches tonight. They will face Scotty McDougall, Mike Romano and Johnny Supsie, respectively. The fourth bout on this unusual program will pit Paul Boesch against Little Beaver.

Ernie is perhaps the best known of the brothers to Trenton fans. He has appeared here four times. His two bouts with Al Gieciewicz were the most exciting ever witnessed at the Stockton Street cockpit. The first went an hour and a half to a draw and the return found Ernie the winner in the most thrilling ending to an arena match. Ernie then disposed of Eli Fischer and fought another terrific 90-minute draw with Frank Bronowicz. His strength and aggressiveness are his stock in trade. He displayed his class in recent matches at the Madison Square Garden where he downed the mighty Hans Steinke.

Rudy is the oldest of the brothers. He is a seasoned and experienced campaigner, and recently defeated Ed "Strangler" Lewis and Joe Savoldi. He is one of the most capable matmen in the game. He is tough and can take punishment as a sponge absorbs water, and also can hand it out as few wrestlers can. He meets a cagey, clever veteran in Romano. Acknowledged one of the most scientific grapplers in the game, Mike is master of all the holds in the book.

Emil, the youngest of the grappling Duseks, appeared here twice, drawing with Eli Fischer and Bert Ruhl, respectively. He leaped in the ring during the Ernie-Gieciewicz duel and got a punch in the face from his excited brother when he tried to help him.

He faces Johnny Supsie, an old favorite here, who in his last four starts fought some corking battles. He has not been defeated here this season. Ernie's opponent is one of the most popular home benders who has grappled here this year.

GOVERNOR NAMES WAGNER

HARRISBURG, Mar. 7.—Heeding demands for an avowed "wet" and experienced liquor dealer, Governor Gifford Pinchot today appointed Warren W. Wagner, of Philadelphia, as the third $10,000 a year member of the State Liquor Control Board. The appointment was for two years. Wagner was a member of the firm of John Wagner & Sons, Philadelphia liquor importers for 32 years previous to prohibition. The firm was established in 1847. The appointment of Wagner fills the vacancy created when T. W. Phillips, Butler oil man, now a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, refused to accept the post at the time the board was created last November.

REPORT EDESEL FORD IN FLORIDA

MIAMI, Fla., Mar. 7.—A report that Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, had left here hastily with a machine gun guard, following receipt of a kidnap threat, was denied here today by state and county police authorities, and at the hotel where the manufacturer had been vacationing. Ford, according to the report, received a kidnap threat in Detroit shortly before he came here February 18th. Believing the kidnappers had followed him, the automobile manufacturer, the report said, asked protection of the sheriff's office and the chief of police and departed hurriedly on a fishing trip to the Florida Keys.

CHICAGO, Ill., Mar. 7.—While the search for John Dillinger, desperado and killer, centered here today, bank officials and police of the Middle West waited with apprehension for him to strike in one of his characteristic bold forays for funds. Special guards were posted at scores of banking institutions here and in surrounding cities, to repel any raid the ace desperado might launch in search of funds to finance further operations of himself and his gang. Ninety-six banks in and about Chicago were under heavy guard, particularly the National Builders Bank here, which it was reported, Dillinger had chosen as one of his first objectives.

LIMA IN NEAR-PANIC

Lima, Ohio, Mar. 7.—With the city "jittery" over persistent reports that John Dillinger, escaped desperado, plans a foray here to free an alleged henchman from jail, Lima was thrown into a near-panic by a fusillade of machine gun fire which proved to be merely target practice by the National Guards. Only a short time after Brigadier General Bush had warned that "gangs are over-running the city of Lima" at least ten ranges of machine gun fire shattered the morning stillness. Downtown Lima was immediately beset by fears that Dillinger and his mob had invaded the city, to rescue Harry Pierpont, alleged "trigger man" of the Midwest gang, who is on trial charged with the slaying of Sheriff Jesse L. Sarber, last October 12th.

care and presently he found it in the doctrine of Professor Alexander Cuzza's antisemitic party.

The boy joined in every anti-Jewish riot. Presently, when he was twenty years old the boy had his big chance. The police prefect of Jassy had sternly suppressed rioting students. The boy shot and killed the police prefect of Jassy. Unknown before, the boy's name now became a headline in the newspapers. It was Cornelius Zelea Codreanu.

Codreanu was handsome, he had a flashing eye, a magnetic voice, and when he spoke there was a something of the quality of a torchsinger in his voice. He was mystic. He inflamed his comrades. And when he was acquitted of the murder Codreanu became a hero of the Rumanian student world.

He went to Germany, studied a while in the University of Leipzig, sniffed the incense of the growing power of Hitlerism, and returned to his own country resolved to become the Hitler of Rumania. He was more romantic than Hitler. His name for his party was "The League of the Arch Angel Gabriel."

Nights when all the villages were dark, Codreanu, now called "The Capitan," would ride with his cohorts through the countryside. Their horses were draped in white, and on the shoulders of the nightriders plumed white wings were fixed. Like the Ku Klux Klan of the old South, the arch angels would descend on a village, call out the shivering inhabitants, and by threats of unearthly violence extort a promise of good behavior.

It was all just good clean fun and the authorities laughed at it until in the elections of 1932 after Codreanu had changed the name of his party to the "iron guard," all the customary fixing of the polls by the government party failed to prevent the Capitan's men from registering 71,702 votes, or nearly 2.62 per cent of the total.

Codreanu made another visit to Germany in the spring of 1933. His newspaper Calendarul thereafter blossomed out. By that time virtually the entire corps of university students was with him; nearly all of the urban youth, and sons of the best families shocked their parents by announcing they had joined the iron guard. The statutes of the guard were, as one prominent Rumanian put it to me, "clearly worthy of the support of any decent citizen." They denounced corruption, lauded honesty, swore to cleanse the state and remake Rumania.

But most important for Europe, the Iron Guard declared that France was the real corruptor of the nation. It was humiliating that Rumania should submit to French influence. There was no mention of Germany, but the mere fact that the Iron Guard was anti-French was sufficient to identify the pro-German politics of the growing organization.

It grew too fast to suit the authorities. Neutral Rumanians estimate that if the Guard had been allowed candidates in the 1933 elections they would have polled a good 300,000 or ten per cent of the total. Just before the elections the new prime minister Duca, dissolved the Iron Guard. A fortnight later he was shot and killed by an Iron Guard student on a railroad station platform.

Capitano Codreanu fled. So did Hitler after his 1923 patsch in Munich. But Hitler came back, and the party that was launched at so short a time ago is today the master of Germany and the bad dream of allied Europe. And because of the example set by Hitler, Rumania today is not laughing at Codreanu. The astonishing thing is that the murder of Duca created, it is true, an initial reaction against the Iron Guard, but today Rumanians of high degree are saying: "It is a shame that Duca was killed. But after all that boy who killed him is the first Rumanian in two generations to risk his life for an ideal. And isn't it true that the state needs cleansing? Isn't it true that the nation needs a rebirth?"

From a score of Rumanians came the same opinion: "This is not the end, but the beginning of the Iron Guard." And this at a time when the police with a thousand or more Iron Guard prisoners, are using all the well known methods of the Balkan third degree to break their spirits.

This is bad news for France. The head of the foreign department of a great French institution came to Bucharest to study the strength of the Iron Guard, of German influence in this important allied country. He went away deeply discouraged.

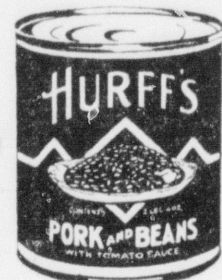

In the files of the Iron Guard prisoners, and from their own enforced confessions, the Siguranza found a death list. It contained certainly the names of Foreign Minister Titulescu, of a series of the King's most intimate friends, and included that of Madame Magda Lupescu, for whom Carol gave up his kingdom once. The Iron Guard objected to Madame Lupescu because she is Jewish. They objected to Titulescu because he is a friend of France, a leading spirit in the Little Entente.

For the moment the bayonets of the palace guard have kept the arch angel's wings from fluttering too near. Titulescu is back in the Cabinet. Rumania is still a member of the Little Entente. But France is sceptical. Should war come in Europe, where would Rumania stand?

(Tomorrow—Europe has its eye on Rumania because Europe is war-scarred and Rumania has oil to burn and oil is needed for modern motorized armies.)

A Sure Sign of Spring

By BURNLEY

SPRING is officially here, now that the month of March is with us again, but the real proof that spring has arrived lies in the fact that the ball players are now working out in their training camps in the mild climes of the South and Far West.

Spring Training! The annual appetizer to whet the baseball fan's eagerness for the coming season.

The fans always love to read the reports that drift in from the various training camps. You know how they always run—Manager Whozis predicts that they'll win the pennant;

Pitcher Whatzis expects to win thirty games; Slugger Schultz says that he will bust down all the fences; Rookie Beezark is going to set the league on fire—and so on.

And then there are always some choice hold-out squabbles to furnish entertainment for the fans back home.

Joe Doakes absolutely refuses to accept the terms offered him by the team—says he will retire to his hog farm rather than play for such a measly sum.

President Blotz of the ball club says that the team has made its final offer; that the ante positively will not be raised, and, besides, the team lost money last season, so the boys shouldn't kick about a few little salary cuts.

And so it goes. But of course all the holdouts are in the line-up when the season gets under way—with very rare exceptions.

Most of the ball clubs are training in Florida this spring, although there are still several teams training in California, and one each in Louisiana and Mississippi.
